GROUND BROKEN FOR FARM SCHOOL BUILDING

Structure to Be Used for Farm Machinery Demonstration

WILL COST $50,000.00

FARM SCHOOL, Aug. 15.—Ground has been broken here, for the first farm machinery demonstration building, the first of its kind in the United States. The new structure to cost over $50,000 will be erected for National Farm School by John Bailey & Brother, Doylestown.

The building will be a focal point on the Campus, Dean C. L. Goodling said today. Plans for the building were prepared by Edwin H. Silverman and Abraham Levy, Philadelphia architects.

The entire administrative staff of the school will be housed in the new building which will be located between the home of Dean Goodling and Laskar Hall. The machinery demonstration section will occupy 4000 square feet of space and instruction and demonstrations will be made of the newest and most up-to-date types of machines as they are developed by factories throughout the country. There will also be a room 2000 square feet, for repairs of machinery in present use on the farms and instruction in conjunction with it.

Another feature of the new building will be a complete wood-working shop and forge shop for use in the making and repairing of machine parts. Another section will contain classrooms and laboratories for testing in connection with farm machinery.

The building will be entirely fire-proof, with imposing exterior of brick and stucco to harmonize with the other buildings on the campus. The lofty cupola will house an old bell which has been suspended from a tree on the campus and which has been used for signal purposes since the beginning of the school in 1896.

In addition to the new farm machinery demonstration building, another improvement at the school will be the building of a new road of permanent type that will traverse the entire grounds of the school. The road will lead off from the state highway route through a new entrance line.

WINDOWS BLOWN IN; TREES UPROOTED; POLES BLOWN DOWN

Victim Laid Down and Fell Asleep Before Storm Broke Over This Section

WM. BRICKLEY DROWNS

Identified by Daniel Fallon at Morgue This Morning; Was Former Ball Player

A severe electrical storm accompanied by high wind and torrential rains swept over a portion of lower Bucks County yesterday afternoon and last night. The storm came out of the west, cut over Newportville, Bristol and up through Edgely.

One man asleep in a ditch was drowned, trees were uprooted, limbs torn loose, poles blown down, fields of standing corn and grain beaten to the ground, windows blown in and basements and low buildings flooded.

The dead: William Brickley, 60, Bristol.

Brickley, long a resident of Bristol, was found in a ditch on Headley street, an infrequent highway, in the Fourth Ward. His body was picked up just off of Corson street.

Identification of Brickley was made positive this morning by Daniel Fallon who had been in his company during the day.

Brickley resided in Bristol for quite some time and then went out to South Dakota for his health. He returned to Bristol a few years ago.

The dead man was at one time employed in the Bristol Rolling Mills and was a well known ball player of the Borough.

A nephew, Joseph O'Brien and a brother-in-law, Michael O'Brien, reside in Philadelphia, according to Chief of Police Jones, who has been investigating the case.

After the storm had subsided Mrs. Charles Layton, colored, Headley and Pine streets, looked out of her window and saw the body of a man in the ditch across the roadway. She called the police who took the man to the Harriman Hospital where he was pronounced dead. Death was due to drowning.

It was quite some time before Brickley was identified but a number of persons visited the morgue of the H. S. Rue Estate, last night, and all gave it as their opinion that the victim was Brickley.

The man was about five feet and eight inches tall, weighed 140 pounds. He wore a blue shirt, dark striped trousers, low shoes and a leghorn hat.

It is presumed that Brickley was taking a nap in a nearby field before it began to rain. Apparently he rolled over into the ditch while asleep and was there when the heavy downpour arrived. The spot where his body was found is low and Headley street drains from both sections to the point. The entire area was under water during the storm yesterday.

The wind blew a large plate glass window in at the barber shop of Joseph Rubino, Beaver and Garden streets.

A large tree at Dorrance and Radcliffe streets, fell and carried the fire alarm wires with it. This started the fire whistle blowing.

A large glass in one of the display windows at the drug store of Serrill Douglas, Dorrance and Wood streets, was broken.

A large tree on Jefferson avenue, between Mansion and Spring streets, fell across the roadway.

An old barn in the rear of the Wright Estate property, Cedar street, near Washington, wobbled at a dangerous angle.

Hundreds of autos were stalled and employees of the Keystone Aircraft Corporation had much difficulty in reaching their homes last night. Many of the Keystone employees park their machines in the yard at the plant and those which faced the storm were drenched.

Open ditches caved in and the canal and creeks nearby were flooded. This caused the water to back up into sewers draining into the low-lands and basements and low spots were flooded.

In the suburban section trees, poles and wires were torn down. The Bell Telephone Company had reports of 150 stations put out of service due to the storm.

USELESS CAPITAL SHIPS

The numbers and total tonnage of capital ships—formerly known as superdreadnoughts—were fixed by treaty at the Washington conference seven years ago. Capital-ship strength as between England and the United States is well balanced. Japan stands in a ratio of five to three, with France and Italy bringing up the rear on a basis of mutual equality.

Reduction all around in this type of warship, which is proposed by the current trend of naval discus- sions, would leave the essential proportions unchanged.

It is quite possible that the complete abolition of capital ships will be seriously contemplated. The argument against further construction is stronger than can be adduced against other units.

These great floating forts are limited, in time of war, to two uses —fighting other capital ships and bombarding an enemy's coast. The neat balance of the battle line would be undisturbed if two belligerent nations kept all their ships of this type at home. And in coastal bom- bardments the superdreadnought is by many experts regarded as having been made obsolete by coast-defense and aviation development.

All world powers will effect savings in the millions for them- selves if they can agree upon pre- serving the present proportions or to scrapping capital ships altogether.

"IMPERIALISM"

During a discussion at the Uni- versity of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs the charge was made that sinister motives are actuating American loans to Latin American countries. This is not a new charge and it apparently reflects a popular point of view.

Sinister motives have played their part in Pan-American rela- tions, but to assume that sinister motives are behind all American loans to South and Central Amer- ican republics is to overlook the real reason for the lending.

North America lends to Latin America that the people of the lat- ter may buy the manufactures of the United States and develop the natural resources which provide us with raw materials and increase Latin American demand for our manufactured goods. If this motive is sinister, then all trade and all money-making are sinister.

That much talked of "American imperialism" is a reaching out for trade, not for land and power. Such imperialism has been practiced in turn by Phoenicia, by Greece, by Rome, by Spain, by France and by England. And it is a form of im- perialism which the borrowers must admit is most benevolent to them.

LIVE where you work

Many people employed in Bristol are commuting to and from their work each day. This means an un- necessary expense and a waste of time. They must leave home earlier and return later than if they lived in the town where they are employed. They have less time for pleasure and less time to spend with their families than if they resided here.

Why commute ?

Bristol as a place of residence offers every oppor- tunity to be found in a large city. There are paved streets, sanitary sewers, good schools and churches of every denomination; periodic collection of ashes and garbage, police protection and ample space for out- door recre tion.

Housing is adequate

Housing facilities are adequate to meet the needs of all. There are dwellings here which will meet the needs of almost every family. Big six room houses with all modern conveniences including front porches and rear yards. They rent as low as $25 per month, and are comparable in type to those in the larger cities renting for nearly twice the amount.

You're a part of the community

If you live in Bristol you are a part of the com- munity. You are not lost in the crowds of a great city where often times your next door neighbor doesn't know you. Live in Bristol and participate in its affairs and you will find life much more worth the living.

Houses - Stores - Apartments

Modern houses, small stores and a few apart- ments are available at attractive rentals. If you are interested, communicate with—

SYNOPSIS
Willie Durant is financing Nita French, an actress, in a musical show, but refuses to put up more money. Jerry Connolly, the man- ager, accuses Durant of being at- tentive to Kitty, the stage-struck check room girl, and inducing her father, Dad Malone, and her sweet- heart, Jimmy, to invest their life savings to gain a hold over her. The boss-office is robbed and Jimmy and Jerry are suspected. Jimmy finds Kitty with Durant and quar- rels with her. Then Nita refuses to finish the performance unless she gets her salary, but Kitty goes on in her part. Kitty explains to Jimmy why she was with Durant.

"You stay there," Jerry pushed Nita into her dressing room. "And if you dare to come out, I'll beat you black and blue." He banged the door closed, and hurried back to the wings followed by Sam and Pete.

A loud burst of applause filled the auditorium. Kitty and Harold ran off hand in hand and then went back again to take their bows. The clapping continued, long and lingering, forcing them onto the stage again and again. Even the members of the cast were adding their plaudits to the general commotion that reigned through- out the house. Jerry was frantically slapping Jimmy on the back, laughing like an hysterical woman.

Taking her final bow, Kitty ran off, her face flushed with excite- ment, her breath coming quickly. "Oh, Jerry—Jimmy—" she flung herself into the manager's arms. "Kitty, you were great. . . That was simply swell. . . You saved the show, kid. . . You've got Nita skinned a mile. . . Where'd you learn to sing like that? . . . How'd you know the lines? . . . You're a great little actress. . ."

From all sides the compliments were showered upon her head. Jerry was pumping her arm up and down excitedly, unable to speak. Beaton, the comedian, was patting her on the shoulder. Jimmy's eyes were shining, and he held tightly to the girl's free hand. Sarah Bogardy was jumping up and down, trying to make herself heard above the general hubbub. And on the outskirts of the crowd, his face alight with joy, his eyes mistily teared, stood Dad Malone.

"How did you ever manage it, Kitty," Jerry at last contrived to regain his voice. "The wig, I mean —and the costume—"

"Oh, it was easy enough," Kitty looked up at the manager and smiled shyly. "You see, Jimmy came and got me. He told me about Nita not going on until she got paid. He hasn't any brother to borrow money from, like he told you. He saw a chance for me to show you I could act. We were afraid to tell you because we thought maybe you wouldn't let me try it."

"I have been just dumb enough to do that little thing," Jerry ad- mitted. "But how did you—"

"I'm coming to that," Kitty ex- plained. "You see when I was looking around that prop room for the manuscript I found a red wig, and so all I had to do was brush it up and get it on. It's not so good as it could be, but the titha covers the worst parts."

"You'll go on on Broadway wear- ing your own hair," Jerry laughed. "Oh, Jerry, do you mean that?" Kitty gasped. "Say it again—about Broadway."

"You heard me the first time," he manager laughed, patting her hand. "But you'd better go and get ready for the next act." He pushed aside the other mem- bers of the cast and hurried Kitty out towards the dressing rooms. "I'll get Nita's costumes for you," he assured the girl.

"You were perfectly gorgeous! Simply magnificent!" Sarah was babbling. "My dear, I never knew you had it in you."

"Aren't you kidding me," Kitty asked shyly.

She loved to hear the words of praise, but she was still self-con- scious, and the effusions of Sarah made her blush.

"What's the difference?" Berta questioned.

"It sounds good, anyhow," Betty put in.

"But just let me give you a tip," Sarah warned, nodding her head significantly. "You keep out of Nita's way. She's threatened to kill you if you go on in this act, and my dear that female is dynamite."

"I'm not afraid of her," Kitty boasted.

"Well, you'd better keep away from her, anyhow," Sarah insisted. "I'll keep an eye on her for you. If she makes a suspicious move I'll yoo-hoo, like this," the comed- ienne yodled shrilly.

"What good'll that do," Barta de- manded.

"Kitty can run or get help," Sarah replied. "Anyway, I just love to worry Nita. Now I'll run out and you see if you can hear me all right."

"The comedienne flew out of the dressing room. The twins ex- changed amused glances.

"That dame's dizzy," Berta grinned.

"When she was a kid somebody left her too long on a merry-go- round," Betty added.

"Oh, she means—" A strident bellow interrupted Kitty's words.

"Can you hear me all right?" Came Sarah's voice from without.

"Yes," Kitty called back.

"Well, we've been on the same bill with sword swallowers," Berta began.

"But never before with a yoo- hooer," Berta finished.

"Overture! Overture!" The call- boy tapped on Kitty's door. A little thrill ran up and down her spine. It was wonderful to have the call-boy knocking at your door, telling you it was time to go on. This seemed like the culmination of all her dreams, and Broadway—Broad- way would be the next stopping place.

"Well, see you later," Simul- taneously the twins turned and hur- ried out.

Kitty added a dab of powder to her nose, fluffed out the soft tulle skirt and followed in their wake. As she rounded the curve in the stairway, she looked below. There stood Jimmy, a huge bouquet of flowers almost hiding his face. She hurried on down.

"I came—I came to say a few words to you before leaving town," Jimmy began hesitatingly, his head still buried in the flowers, ashamed to look up. He seemed to be play- ing the role of a martyr and get- ting a great deal of melancholy satisfaction from it.

"Why, Jimmy," Kitty gasped. "Where are you going?"

"I ain't decided definitely yet, but before I go, I just want you to re- member that I—well, I—" he stum- bled self-consciously. "I started you on the road to fame."

Kitty bit her lip to keep from smiling. Jimmy was so serious, so young. "But why all the tragedy? What's the big idea?" she spoke lightly.

"As I gaze from my lonely hut," Jimmy began solemnly, "over the mountain tops at sundown, I'll think of you and wonder if you re- member the boy who placed your ladder on the foot—I mean your foot on the ladder of fame."

"Oh, Jimmy, I—"

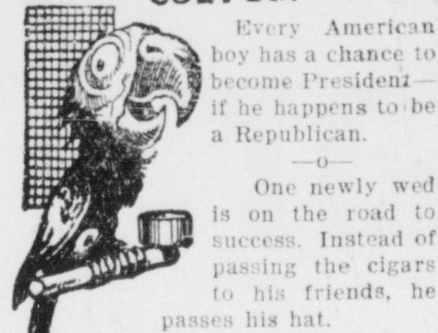

"Let me finish. Here is a slight token of my esteem." The boy thrust the flowers towards Kitty, scarcely daring to raise his head.

"There ain't nothing personal in it. It's just what any fan might give to any artist."

"They're beautiful, Jimmy," Kitty took the bouquet and held it lovingly. "Thank you so much." Suddenly she threw her arms about the boy's neck and kissed him.

"Don't, Kitty, please," Jimmy pushed her away. "Don't make our parting any harder. Can't you see I'm trying not to break down?"

COLYUM

What was once his nation's name. So I asked him, "Tell me true, Are you Pole, or Russian Jew, English, Scotch, Italian, Russian, Belgian, Spanish, Swiss, Moravian, Dutch or Green or Scandinavian?" Then he raised his head on high. And he gave me this reply: "What I was is naught to me, In this land of Liberty. In my soul, as man to man, I am just American."

Former Sufferer Pays Grateful Tribute to Famous Medicine; It Triumphed When Others Failed

MR. FRANK M. JOHNSON

"All my neuritis pains are gone, thanks to this new medicine, Konjola," said Mr. Frank M. Johnson, Mill Run, Pa. "Neuritis had made life miserable for me for a long time. The pains were so terrific that I could not sleep at night. My arms and hands had become numb and my condition was growing worse from day to day. Then my liver became sluggish and inactive.
"Today, after a few weeks' treatment of Konjola, I am like a different man. Neuritis was quickly driven from my body. Konjola regulated and cleansed my liver so that all of my troubles have vanished. What a glorious thing it is to have health again. To Konjola goes all the credit, and I am fully convinced it is the master medicine."
Konjola is sold in Bristol, Pa., at Hoffman's Cut Rate store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. (Adv.)

THIRD WARD NINE WINS
A VERY CLOSE BATTLE

By T. M. Juno

The Third Ward baseball nine rallied in the fifth inning to defeat the fast Andalusia nine by the score of 6-5. The game was played on Sullivan's field, Tuesday evening.

Sadler who again took the mound for the "Pikers" gave another of his wonderful exhibitions. In all he fanned nine batters, six of these were the first six willow carriers to face him.

Tomlinson allowed the Third Ward-ers but seven hits, but two bad innings, the fourth and fifth, spoiled his day.

Gleason with two singles led the winners with the stick. Cooke gathered two bingles for the losers.

"Bill" Wilkinson's sensational shoestring catch of Purcell's line drive, labeled for a triple, was the feature of the evening.

The downtown boys, with a record of twelve wins thus far this season,

would like to arrange a few week-end games. Teams desiring games are asked to get in touch with John

Brasica, Otter street.

GRAND

The impact of 6,000 tons of ships' wood and steel in any kind of waters is pretty serious business. A scene of that sort was filmed for the new Phyllis Haver star vehicle, "Sal of Singapore," a talking thriller, after a week of trying, and the "rushes" showed that some lively thrills await the spectators of the picture.

The action called for the steamship Wallingford, 3,000 tons, to jam its sister ship the Silverado, 3,500 tons, and the Wallingford's crew to make fast and board their neighbor whilst the Silverado crew fought them to repel the boarding.

Howard Higgin directed the action from a small boat fifty yards distant. His assistants, Leigh R. Smith and John C. Rohlf, ran the show on the ships. Collisions that might have resulted in the loss of lives, were an ever-present peril. Captains Conrad and Hanks of the Wallingford and the Silverado finally effected the feat without property damage or a single accident to any of those participating.

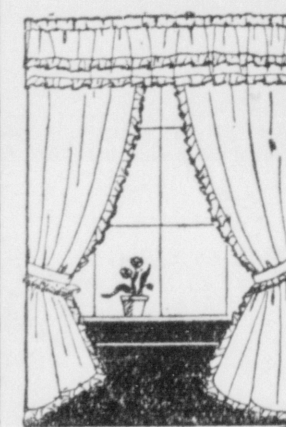

When it came to body bruises, black eyes and the wounds of combat, it was a different matter. Actors playing the members of the crews of the two ships found themselves in a kind of battle royal that raged all over the main deck of the Silverado.

"It was worse than any fistie main event I ever took part in," said Jack Perry, afterwards. Alan Hale led the attacking party, and Fred Kohler the defenders. Among those who did themselves proud in the nautical scrap were Noble Johnson, Dan Wolheim, Pat Harmon, Jules Cowles, Harry Wilson, Charles Morrison, Sailor

THE modern, high-compression, high-speed motor demands an oil that will stand up under the excessive heat generated and will function as near perfectly as is humanly possible under the conditions prevalent in today's motors. The problem has been to secure in one oil the best qualities of the finest paraffine and naphthene crude oils. In our laboratories we have perfected a blend of lubricating oil made from two crude oils. It has advantages only to be found in a two-base oil. If you regard your motor with the affection you have for a favorite dog (as some of us do) you should at least try
